At first 'Newport' Plum looks a lot like 'Thundercloud'. Looking closer we see that there are differences. The leaves are very similar, dark red purple. The flowers have similar timing, but instead of pink, they are white with a pink throat. They are also fragrant. The nodes on 'Newport' are closer, giving a more dense floral display. 'Newport' may be slightly hardier than 'Thundercloud'. This tree should be grown in full sun as the leaves turn toward green in the shade. Good drainage is essential for the health of this tree. It will withstand moderate drought, but will stress in too wet or too dry of a situation. Once stressed they are more likely to be attacked by bugs and disease. Robinson Nursery offers 'Newport' Plum as branched bare root trees.
